

USC Center for Law, History and Culture

invites applications for

Graduate Student and Law Student Fellows

The Center for Law, History, and Culture is an inter-disciplinary research center supported by the Gould School of Law and USC Dornsife College of Letters, Arts and Sciences. It sponsors various activities, including conferences and workshops throughout the year. This Fall, the theme of our events will be “Law & Feminism,” and symposia will include a law and literature conference on “Consent Before the Law” and “Is Marriage for White People?” In the Spring, our events will be devoted to a variety of themes and disciplines, including legal anthropology, legal history and law and literature.

CLHC Graduate Fellows participate in the events sponsored by the Center for Law, History, and Culture, including workshops of works-in-progress, book talks, conferences and symposia. In addition, Graduate Fellows receive $1000.00 in research support for either (a) research expenses related to their own scholarship in an area of law and the humanities or (b) travel to the annual Law, Culture, and the Humanities Conference, which takes place next year at Birkbeck, University of London in London, United Kingdom, March 22-23, 2013 (for more details, see <http://www.law.syr.edu/academics/centers/lch/conference.html>).

We welcome proposals from graduate students across the disciplines and within the Law school. To apply to be a CLHC Fellow, please submit a letter describing your research project and your interest in the area of law and humanities, along with a CV or resume. For those of you applying for research related expenses, please include a budget itemizing your projected expenses. If you are applying to go to the LCH conference, there are two ways to go -- either as a paper-presenter or as a spectator. For those of you who are interested in presenting papers, you can submit online at <http://www.regonline.com/builder/site/Default.aspx?EventID=1112745>; we would be happy to help you organize a panel of like-minded scholars as well. Note that the submission deadline for LCH paper proposals is October 15, 2012.
