University Students Living with Mental Illness: Changing the Conversation

A discussion with former
U.S. Rep. Patrick Kennedy

Patrick Kennedy, who has struggled with bipolar disorder and depression for decades, is a leading proponent of destigmatizing mental illness. He will join USC law Prof. Elyn Saks, USC law student Evan Langinger and psychiatry resident Michelle Wu to engage in a lively discussion about how they managed their mental illness through their university years.

Monday, September 9, 2013
12:15 – 1:30pm

Room 7, USC Law

Lunch and seating will be provided on a first-come, first-served basis.
