USC Gould Kicks Off Historic $150 Million Campaign
Luminaries from the legal profession, including Los Angeles County District Attorney Jackie Lacey, gathered in downtown Los Angeles on February 6 as USC Gould School of Law kicked off its $150 million fundraising initiative. The gala event drew more than 200 friends, alums, administrators, faculty and student leaders to the historic Vibiana in Los Angeles.

USC President C. L. Max Nikias opened the evening’s festivities by pointing to USC Gould’s stellar reputation and commitment to legal innovation. Dean Robert Rasmussen, Los Angeles County District Attorney Jackie Lacey ’82 and Chair of the Board of Councilors at Gould Ken Doran ’81 shared how USC Gould and the Trojan Family have impacted their lives and careers.

USC Gould Recruits Top Legal Scholars
USC Gould School of Law has recruited two nationally renowned scholars from Duke: Kim Krawiec and Mitu Gulati. Krawiec is a prominent expert in forbidden markets, insider trading and the effects of diversity in the boardroom. Her current research analyzes “taboo trades” - exchanges that are contested by society and, in some cases, forbidden altogether. Gulati’s research includes contract evolution, sovereign debt restructuring, customary international law and judicial behavior. Gulati is currently conducting empirical research projects on the euro area debt crisis, judicial management and the question of how courts determine customary international law.

inequality lives on, reproducing itself in a vicious cycle. Even if all discrimination were to end tomorrow, self-reinforcing racial disparities would continue, according to the new book "Reproducing Racism: How Everyday Choices Lock in White Advantage," by USC Gould School of Law Professor Daria Roithmayr.

Capron to Study TB Prevention

Prof. Alexander Capron will study the effectiveness of legal measures to control tuberculosis in homeless shelters in a research project funded by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation's Public Health Law Research program. Capron and co-investigator Peter Kerndt, M.D., M.P.H., director of the Tuberculosis Control Program for the Los Angeles County Department of Public Health will identify which legal mechanisms will best reduce TB cases among homeless people using emergency shelters.

Faculty in the News

Media outlets routinely seek USC Gould faculty for expert commentary. Following are a few highlights of recent faculty contributions to news stories and publications.

The Huffington Post (Jan. 18, 2014): An op-ed ran by Daria Roithmayr about income inequality dividing along racial lines. Despite assertions we live in a post-racial age, Roithmayr wrote, the wealth gap between whites and other racial groups persists. "A number of institutional "feedback loops" parlay earlier advantage into continuing advantage," she wrote.

U.S. News & World Report (Jan 16, 2014): The USC Gould School's online master of laws program, which begins in fall 2014, was covered. For Brazilian lawyer Maria Marta Dias Heringer Lisboa, obtaining an LL.M in the U.S. would be an unrealized dream. Because she already has a career, the Gould School's online program is a better fit. "I love Los Angeles and I love the U.S." she says. "It's a dream. But two years is too much time. I need to work here because of my clients and because my law firm needs me here in-house," Maria said.

The New York Times (Jan 16, 2014): Scott Bice was quoted about the Roman Polanski legal case. "Judge Fidler's musings about public opinion were a legitimate concern for Mr. Polanski's legal team. If I had been a lawyer at the time, involved in the question of whether or not he was getting appropriate treatment from the court, that would have been relevant," Mr. Bice said. "I'd have wanted to know that," he said.
