The Real Estate Economy: Roar, Whimper or Silence?

Real estate investors hit pause when the pandemic first hit. The pause did not last long, and activity quickly resumed. The heavy deal flow in 2021 and the first half of 2022 were virtually unprecedented. For a while, even the stock market's volatility and rising interest rates could not slow transactions down. Interest rates continued to rise but there was no comparable decline in prices. When the delta could not be bridged, transactions fell off a cliff. Opportunities always exist, no matter the situation. This panel of economic experts will look into their crystal balls and share their insights and predictions for the future of the economy and real estate in particular.

California Is Becoming More Business Friendly?

TRACK A – SESSION 1A

Baldwin Hills Crenshaw Mall
Challenges and Aspirations

It has been reported that gentrification is pricing residents out of their historically Black neighborhoods and forcing them to move to cheaper cities. Projects currently facing criticism are the billion-dollar approved mixed-use redevelopment plan for the struggling Baldwin Hills Crenshaw Mall; the introduction of Metro's K Line along Crenshaw Boulevard to connect with Los Angeles International Airport; and new development proposed and contemplated in the Crenshaw Boulevard corridor. Learn about the changes in the neighborhood, market demands, and laws and other tools spurring and addressing gentrification in this community.

TRACK B – SESSION 1B

Turning the Tide on Homelessness:
What Is Working and What Remains To Be Done

In the midst of the hustle and bustle of a thriving Downtown Los Angeles, Skid Row remains a reminder of the homelessness crisis that impacts so much of Los Angeles. While the latest homelessness count in Los Angeles continues to show an increase in homelessness from prior years, the rate of increase is decreasing. Could this be the turn of a new tide on homelessness? This panel will discuss the various State and local initiatives from Project Homekey, Roomkey, Community Development Block Grants, tiny homes, relaxed development standards and ballot measures to identify what may be the sources for improvement.

TRACK C – SESSION 1C

Industrial / Warehouse / Self-Storage – Looking to the Future!

This panel is designed as a window into the future of industrial real estate projects and related product types, including self-storage, warehouses and logistics facilities. Panelists will lead us in a review of what is propelling this market forward – how the market is evolving, how project design is changing to meet the needs of future tenants, and what users will drive the market demand in the future. Join our experts for a forward-looking discussion focusing on how these deals will be done in a challenging financial environment.

KEYNOTE ADDRESS: Stan Kasten, Los Angeles Dodgers

Sports teams, real estate development and civic identity are intertwined. No sports franchise personifies a city and its ambitions more than the Los Angeles Dodgers. From the stadium's dislocation of the Chavez Ravine community through to their important footprint in this city, the Dodgers have been a force to be reckoned with. Stan Kasten is a serial creator of winning franchises. Since Mr. Kasten became the Dodgers' President and CEO, the team has topped the Majors in attendance each full season, while he has been continuously making improvements to Dodger Stadium to keep the league's third-oldest stadium among the best facilities in baseball. Hear from a seasoned veteran in this 30-minute discussion about how manage risk and engage the community in a positive way, as he cites some of the legal challenges along the way, and whether city-financed stadiums still make sense.

The Legislative Assault on The Housing Crisis – Developers Armed, Cities Alarmed?

California's housing production has long lagged population growth creating a State-wide housing crisis. The State Legislature has sought to tackle this problem by passing new laws that provide benefits, such as density bonuses, vested rights, 'by right' development in certain zones, streamlined city reviews and CEQA exemptions. Our panel of developers and city leadership will address the extraordinary opportunity to generate new housing ushered by these new laws, the challenges posed by their application to disparate local conditions, city angst over diminished land use powers, and the goal of seeking cooperation and alignment of interests of developers, city leaders and stakeholders in resolving a crisis the State cannot ignore.

Office 2023 – Changes, Challenges, and Opportunities

Of all of the commercial real estate asset classes, Office holdings may be the most variable going forward. Given the fluidity of hybrid work since COVID, it is unclear how the traditional office and five day work week will transition to accommodate the new "normal" and how Offices environments (either new or re-designed), Landlord and Tenants can entice and retain on-site workers and top talent. Alternatively, how can these office buildings be transitioned to an alternative commercial or residential use?

LA Style Adaptive Reuse:

Tales from K-Town to the Westside

Given the rapidly evolving operational and programming preferences of high-tech office users and the shift away from legacy retail and office building configurations, developers are creatively reexamining adaptive reuse opportunities. Three projects that demonstrate the range of adaptive reuse from Koreatown to West Los Angeles will be discussed, including Lumen (formerly Trident Center), One Westside (formerly the Westside Pavilion), and Jamison Properties' Gemma I & II, each displaying creativity in approach and a distinct application of the multi-variable analysis that informs and supports any adaptive reuse endeavor.

The Great Financial Market Shake-Up of 2022 – Where Do We Go From Here?

The capital markets started 2022 with a bang but ended with barely a whimper. Rising inflation, increasing interest rates and stock market volatility contributed to silencing the capital markets. As we approach the end of the first quarter of 2023, these panelists will discuss where the markets are now and set expectations for the remainder of 2023 and beyond. They will also describe a “typical” capital stack in this environment and identify various types of capital sources, both traditional and new.
